

Our boats

With so much choice, let us point you in the right direction.

Of course, you'll need a boat that is big enough to accommodate you and your crew. And, depending on the make-up of your party, you might prefer a particular configuration of cabins and communal space over another. If this is a consideration for you, here are some recommendations, to help get you started.

Good for families and groups of all sizes.

These are our newest boats with a large saloon and kitchen at rear and the cabins are clustered together at the front. Very large sundecks for sunbathing and al fresco dining.

Good for large families and groups of friends.

Large boats with massive sundeck for al fresco dining and sunbathing. A large saloon and kitchen at the front. Cabins are clustered at the rear, but are large and have good-sized, en-suite bathrooms.

Good for two groups of friends who would like a little more privacy.

Cabin(s) at rear and front of boat, divided with saloon and kitchen areas in middle. Sundecks have tables for alfresco dining.

Good for families with slightly younger children.

Saloon and kitchen areas at the front which open to a high-sided seating area, so the kids are a little more contained and can still see where they're going. Sundecks have tables for alfresco dining.

Good for families with older children.

Saloon and kitchen areas are at the rear of these boats and the cabins are clustered together at the front. It's quite a steep climb up to the sundeck sundecks, so these boats are much suited for older children who can move about the boat more easily. The sundecks have seating, but no tables.

Good for large groups of adults or two small families.

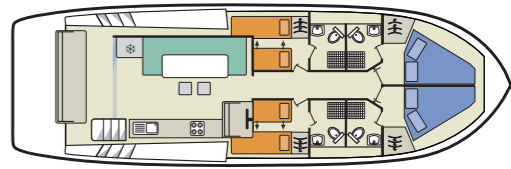

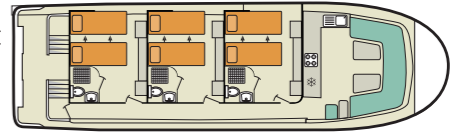

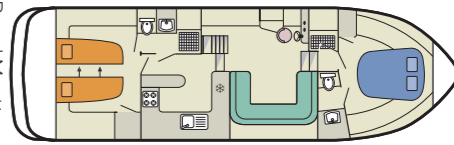

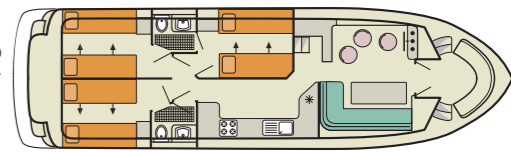

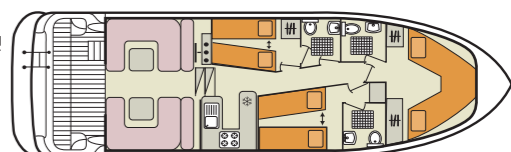

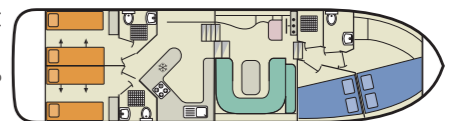

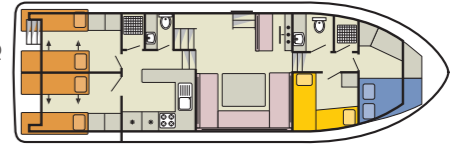

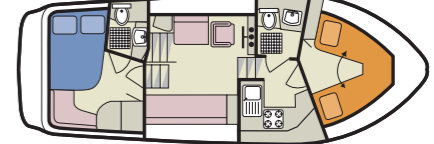

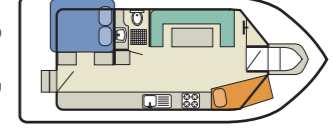

Cabins are located at front and rear, with saloon and kitchen areas in the middle - affording a little privacy to each end of these boats. Other features and category ratings vary.

Good for small groups of adults or an extended family (i.e. with grandparents).

Cabins are located at front and rear, with saloon and kitchen areas in the middle - affording a little privacy to each end of these boats. Other features and category ratings vary.

Great for couples or small families.

Our smallest boats in a variety of layouts, and the little ones are close by at night.
